THE RICE INDUSTRY.

That there is a necessity for organized effort on the part of the Chinese rice growers of Hawali to properly grade and market their crops, is the conviction of Fred L. Waldron, one of the largest exporters of rice in Honolulu. He believes that if the right method was used in doing these things the growers could easily secure at least fifty cents a sack more than they can now obtain.

Among the Japanese in this Territory Hawaiian rice is not popular and most of this staple is imported for them from Japan. But on the Coast Hawaiian rice, the small grained variety, is in demand and brings good price. So far, however, there has been no effort among the growers here to make the importations from the mainland. best of it, and what they lose is made up by the middlemen on the Coast, mostly in San Francisco.

Those conversant with the industry here are convinced that when the local growers and millers can get together, carefully grade the product of the padindustry of Hawaii will take its place among the profit making ventures of this rich country.
